

Above—Prof. Albert Einstein, the famous scientist, and Mrs. Einstein reaching New York on the Rotterdam. Thousands greeted the propounder of the new theory of relativity, who comes to America as a member of the Zionist missionary delegation.

Copyright, Paul Thompson.

At left—Prof. Einstein in a characteristic pose, photographed just after his recent arrival in New York, when he proved to a host of interviewers that he is far from being the cold thinking machine his devotion to science might indicate.

Copyright, Paul Thompson.

Col. George Harvey, New York editor and recently appointed Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, chatting with President Harding on the porch of the White House after a conference at which international affairs were discussed.

Photo, International.

Miss Roberta Willard of Newport and New York on the golf links at Virginia Hot Springs.

Photo Central News Service.

At right—Remarkable snapshot at Lingfield, England, showing Swinerton falling in the hurdle race and bringing down Frank Webber. Neither M. Tighe, who rode Swinerton, nor E. Piggott, who was thrown, was severely injured.

Photo, Wide World.

Ernestine Pulver of Cicero, N. Y., a member of the Syracuse University girls' gun team, demonstrating the correct way of shooting from a sitting position. She is one of the best shots in the colleges.

Ella Retford, English vaudeville star, pointing out the wonders of New York's sky line to Dorothy Ward, noted English actress, on their recent arrival on the Mauretania to fill American engagements.

Photo, International.

New photograph of Myron T. Herriek, named by President Harding as the new Ambassador to France. Mr. Herriek already has served the Government in this post.

Copyright, Harris & Ewing.

Sir Ernest Shackleton, famous British Antarctic explorer, photographed on his arrival from England on the Mauretania.

Photo, International.